Escuelas de Español en Andalucía

The Spanish Association in Andalusia was founded with the intention of uniting the efforts and interests of the best schools in the sector, and promoting solidarity and collaboration among its members.

What guarantees do we offer?

All member schools guarantee the high quality of their courses, accommodation and other services through accreditation from the Cervantes Institute (Accredited Center). These guarantees include:

- comply with quality requirements in the teaching of Spanish;
- comply with the legal requirements to perform teaching;
- have adequate resources for teaching;
- have a team of teachers with appropriate qualifications and training;
- follow a Teaching Plan that ensures adequate progress; establish a maximum number of students per class;
- carry out truthful advertising in relation to the offer;
- clearly detail the prices of courses and complementary services.

What does Andalusia offer you?

You can get to know the culture of Andalusia, for example, by discovering its spaces declared World Heritage Sites. In Granada, you have the Alhambra, the Generalife and the Albaicín; in Córdoba, its historic center with the Mosque; in Seville, the Cathedral, the Alcázar and the Archive of the Indies; and in Jaén, the monumental complexes of Úbeda and Baeza. In addition, you can enjoy festivals such as Holy Week, the Cádiz Carnival, the Rocío in Huelva or the April Fair in Seville.

Cadiz (Andalusia)

The southern corner

From Cádiz, the sea, its people, its bay, its history and its desire to live. The province of Cádiz is very diverse, with regions that are worth visiting, from the countryside of Jerez de la Frontera to its towns in Campo de Gibraltar or a tour of the white towns and resting somewhere on the coast between Tarifa and Sanlúcar de Barrameda.

Landscapes

On its 260 kilometers of Atlantic coast, its long, fine sand beaches stand out, many of them not yet urbanized or extremely exploited for tourism. The entire coastline is part of the Costa de la Luz. We can find urban beaches of excellent quality such as those of La Victoria in Cádiz capital or La Barrosa in Chiclana, to virgin beaches such as those of Levante in El Puerto; Los Caños de Meca and Zahora in the municipality of Barbate, Bolonia in Tarifa and El Palmar in Vejer. In the interior, it is worth highlighting the Jerez wineries or the Ruta de los Pueblos Blancos and the Ruta del Toro.

Where is it located?

It is the southernmost province of the Iberian Peninsula, only 14 kilometers from the African continent. The province is bordered to the north by the provinces of Seville and Huelva, to the east by the province of Málaga, to the southwest by the Atlantic Ocean, to the southeast by the Mediterranean Sea, and to the south by the Strait of Gibraltar and the British colony of Gibraltar.

Córdoba (Andalusia)

Four cultures and a lot of life

Córdoba is known worldwide for its Mosque-Cathedral. It has a monumental historic center declared World Heritage and full of little streets where one would want to stay, patios full of flowers, pleasant squares and lively taverns in which to enjoy a good flamenco show or taste the typical gastronomy.

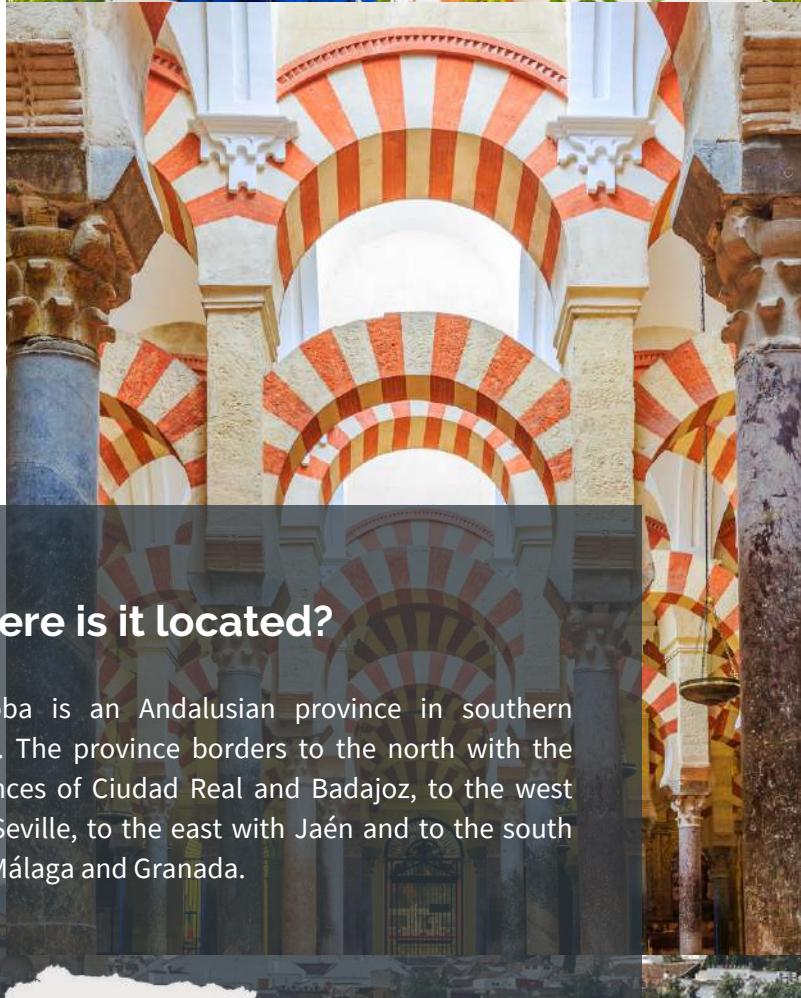

Gastronomy

Going for tapas, savoring typical dishes of popular cuisine, discovering equestrian art, enjoying a flamenco show at a tablao or relaxing in an Arab bath are special experiences in Córdoba. The best-known areas for tapas are the old town and the neighborhoods of San Lorenzo, San Andrés and Santa Marina.

Where is it located?

Córdoba is an Andalusian province in southern Spain. The province borders to the north with the provinces of Ciudad Real and Badajoz, to the west with Seville, to the east with Jaén and to the south with Málaga and Granada.

Granada (Andalusia)

Culture and traditions

Granada is music and poetry, pure monumental art, ancient culture. It is a province that reaches the sky from the steep peaks of the Sierra Nevada; cities of impressive architecture that are calm in the Altiplano; white towns scattered across valleys and slopes that end at the cliffs and beaches of the Tropical Coast. The province of Granada, a privileged tourist destination, allows travelers to practice skiing in the Sierra Nevada, venture through the hidden Alpujarra villages, tour the last frontier of Al-Andalus in Western Granada or stay in caves that recall troglodyte life. A land of mild, warm summers and winters suitable for enjoying snow sports.

Landscapes

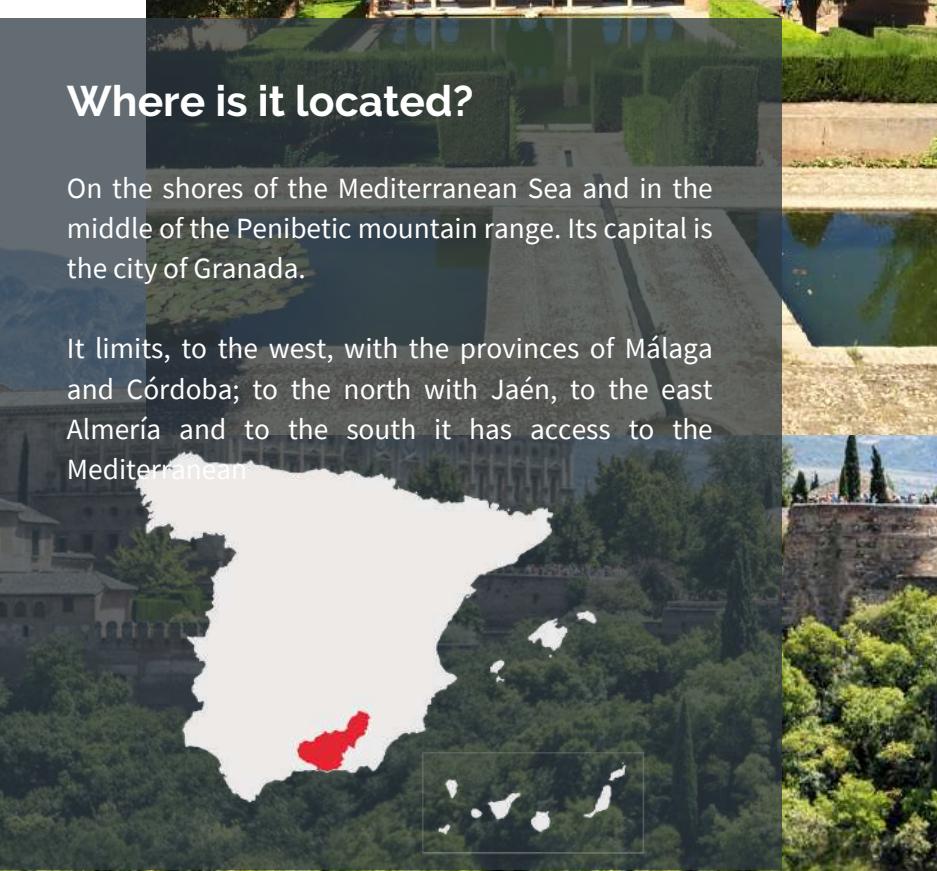

The province of Granada is characterized by a staircase of plateaus that descend from the high peaks to the Mediterranean Sea. These plateaus and the altitude of their lands make their climate have very cold winters. This intensely influences vegetation, agriculture, livestock and hunting.

Where is it located?

On the shores of the Mediterranean Sea and in the middle of the Penibetic mountain range. Its capital is the city of Granada.

It limits, to the west, with the provinces of Málaga and Córdoba; to the north with Jaén, to the east Almería and to the south it has access to the Mediterranean.

Malaga (Andalusia)

Culture and traditions

Málaga, ancient and cosmopolitan in the past, preserves its historical roots intact. If in ancient times it witnessed the origins of man and Mediterranean culture, today it has become the leading power in the Andalusian tourism industry, keeping alive its tradition as a welcoming and creative land. Seafaring Malaga on its coast where it is never winter; with a mountain vocation, inland, where nature is shown in all its splendor. White towns with beautiful architecture, wrapped in romantic legends, put their light in the hidden valleys where life flows peacefully.

Landscapes

The Mediterranean Sea directly bathes a total of 14 municipalities in Malaga. It is possible to go to hidden enclaves where the purest nature surrounds the environment, or more touristy and consolidated spaces. We cannot forget the interior landscape, with more than 15 protected spaces as a reserve, place or natural monument.

Where is it located?

The province of Málaga is located south of the Mediterranean coast, between the provinces of Granada and Cádiz, and bordering to the north with those of Córdoba and Seville.

Its capital is Malaga.

Seville (Andalusia)

Culture and traditions

Between the foothills of the Sierra Morena to the north and the Sierra Sur, the Guadalquivir, the old Betis, flows, watering a rich and fertile valley. In its lower course, 70 kilometers from the sea, sits the ancient city of Seville, capital of the Andalusian Autonomous Community and the largest and most populated province of Andalusia. The riverside towns and cities are living testimony of their historical and cultural past. Seville, emblematic city of universal fame, Arab, Jewish and Roman, also in its river, its river port, privileged destination for West Indies trade. Its artistic and folkloric manifestations make it a privileged tourist destination.

Landscapes

The province of Seville is a mosaic of cultures that have their roots in the most remote past. The large river basin of the Guadalquivir, Sierra Morena and the marshes of the Doñana Natural Park, offer the visitor a landscape map of large wetlands, refuge for a varied birdlife; walk mountain trails of lush Mediterranean vegetation or contemplate the fighting bull.

Where is it located?

It is the capital of Andalusia, as well as the largest province in the autonomous community. It borders the provinces of Málaga and Cádiz to the South, Huelva to the West, Badajoz to the North, and Córdoba to the East.

The Enforex school in Seville is in a stunning building from the beginning of the 20th century that perfectly exemplifies the Andalusian modernist style. The intricate metal of the railing, its many statues and paintings, the bright yellow and blue tiles and the balconies from which to look out over the hectic street immerse our students in an unmistakably Spanish context.
